

FIS License Renewals for the 2016-2017 Season

British Ski & Snowboard have opened up applications for FIS Licenses for the 2016/17 season, and there is an early bird rate until the 30th June before the price increases.

To be eligible for a FIS license you must renew your Snowsport England membership, as this provides your liability insurance for competing, and BSS won't accept your FIS license application until this has been completed. Please click here to renew your Snowsport England membership online.

Alpine and ski cross competitors must be born in 2000 or earlier, but other disciplines may vary, and there are BASS points requirements for a FIS license.

Male athletes born in 2000 must have equal to or less than 290 BASS points, and female athletes must have equal to or less than 270 points. Male or female athletes born in 1999 must have equal to or less than 240 or 230 BASS points respectively. Any other male athletes must have 200 or fewer BASS points, whilst all remaining female athletes must have a maximum of 190 BASS points.

For more information and to register for a FIS license, please head to the BSS website.

What is a FIS (Federation International du Ski) license?

All athletes competing at FIS events must have a FIS license - If you are unsure whether you require a FIS license, please discuss it with your coach now or refer to the detailed descriptions given beside each FIS license type on the BSS website when you enter the online registration system.
